Confirmation Class of 2014 leads an inspiring Shavuot Torah service

Shavuot celebrates God’s giving of the Torah to the Jewish people at Mount Sinai, which promised a future filled with God’s protection and grace. On June 3, the first night of Shavuot, we celebrated with a service and Confirmation ceremony led by our Religious School Confirmands. After affirming their individual commitments to Judaism, the eleven Confirmands stepped into their own Jewish futures.

During the service, Confirmands led prayers, read from the Torah, and spoke about what being Jewish meant to them. (In the box at right, we share part of Sarah Mae Weise’s essay, which is representative of the thoughtful, personal speeches given.) Each Confirmand received diplomas, gifts, and blessings from Rabbi Sarah Hronsky and Temple officers.

Confirmation is a two-year program focusing on prayer and spiritual connection, ethics, social action, the nature of human beings, and the Jewish perspective on life.

Mazal Tov to the members of the Temple Beth Hillel Religious School Class of 2014: Nicholas Cashdan, Marlee Dyas, Darah Haimovitz, Jacob Haimovitz, Samantha Robbins, Amani Ross, Matthew Siegal, Eliana Sternin, Amanda Tanner, Sarah Mae Weise, and Robyn Valentine.

“This School and This Temple Are My Home”
by Sarah Mae Weise
Confirmation Class of 2014

For most, being Jewish is about going to temple, celebrating Shabbat, and getting one’s Bar or Bat Mitzvah. For me, I see my Jewish identity as being a part of a welcoming community of people who share the same traditions that I do.

I have been coming to Temple Beth Hillel for the last 16 years, and I don’t regret any moment of it. I always knew I would continue my Jewish education after my Bat Mitzvah. As a result, and because of the wonderful teachers who have touched my life, I have learned to appreciate my...
Our Children
by Rabbi Sarah Hronsky

On Thursday, June 12, three teenage boys went missing in Israel, and were soon identified as having been kidnapped. Can you imagine if that was your son or daughter? Gil-Ad Shaer (16), Eyal Yifrach (19) and Naftali Frenkel (16) disappeared into thin air, and the media craze that set in has brought important but also confusing coverage to this serious situation.

I have heard discussion points from every angle: the boys deserved it because they were hitchhiking, their parents chose to live in a territory putting their children at risk, or that the boys weren’t kidnapped at all – it is simply a ploy of the Israeli government to thwart a peace process.

I have heard of Israeli children racing home from school or camp to see if any new developments have come up on the news. I have heard of Muslim and Jewish Israeli standing side-by-side at prayer vigils, and of 2300 Tel Avivans (packed into an airplane hangar trying to set a Guinness World Record for observing Shabbat) joined in prayer for these three children.

Certainly, a country both divided in thought, but also united; united in knowledge that no human being should ever suffer the human rights violation of captivity, of kidnapping. Our tradition is very specific about this. The Babylonian Talmud, Bava Batra 8a-8b, teaches that the redemption of captives is a religious duty of great importance. Acknowledging that death alone is horrible, death by sword ahead. Bless their work. Let success be close at hand.

This dismay is almost too much to bear. Return Gil-Ad Shaer, Naftali Frenkel, and Eyal Yifrach to the cradle of their parents’ arms, and the refuge of their homes, speedily in the life and in health. Bless their families with endurance and faith that they will soon be reunited in the fullness of joy. Bless our boys, in their captivity, with hope and courage. Grant them the strength and fortitude to face chas y’shalom any shame or tyrannies forced upon them.

Rock of Israel, hasten their release. Grant them lives of Torah and parnasa, rich with health and happiness, joy and peace. Let rescue be near. Baruch Atah Adonai, Eloheinu Melech ha’olam matir asurim. Blessed are you, Adonai our God, sovereign of the universe, who releases the captive. Amen.

As Elie Wiesel instructed, “Hope is like peace. It is not a gift from God. It is a gift only we can give one another.” I beg us Lift your voice in prayer, in honest discussion, in political activism...lift our voices and spread hope, spread a shelter of peace over our family during the most difficult of times. Cen yah tovot – Be this God’s will.

God of the prisoner, God of the captive, the voice of anguish echoes across the land.

Our sons, kidnapped, hijacked, torn from their lives and dreams, are held captive by violence and hatred by those who would take our land and destroy our people.

Guardians of Israel, bless those who have dedicated themselves to returning our sons to safety and shelter. Grant them skill and wisdom in this hour of need. Give them the tools they need in the days ahead. Bless their work. Let success be close at hand.

This dismay is almost too much to bear. Return Gil-Ad Shaer, Naftali Frenkel, and Eyal Yifrach to the cradle of their parents’ arms, and the refuge of their homes, speedily in the life and in health. Bless their families with endurance and faith that they will soon be reunited in the fullness of joy. Bless our boys, in their captivity, with hope and courage. Grant them the strength and fortitude to face chas y’shalom any shame or tyrannies forced upon them.

If I am not for myself, who will be for me? If am only for myself, what am I? And if not now, when? – Rabbi Hillel

Leadership training for both today and tomorrow
by Barbara Motz, President

At the end of April, I joined 100 other new and incoming temple presidents from congregations at the Union for Reform Judaism’s 16th Annual Scheidt Institute in Atlanta, Georgia.

We came from all over North America, except for one who came from as far away as New South Wales, Australia, to develop our skills as lay leaders of our congregations.

The program was an amazing experience. We had an opportunity to learn, study and pray with inspirational leaders of our movement, including Rabbi Rick Jacobs, URJ President, and Rabbi Aaron Panken, head of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion. There were programs and discussions on many important topics.

Not only did I get wonderful ideas for our own Temple Beth Hillel, but I came away with a renewed sense of appreciation of our movement and an eagerness to help our synagogue continue moving forward into the 21st century.

At the Institute’s Shabbat services, Rabbi Jacobs began calling aliyahs for the Torah service. He invited for the first aliyah those who had grown up in the Reform Movement. Many, including myself, came forward.

For the second aliyah, he asked those whose parent or grandparent had been a temple president to come up. A surprisingly large number of people approached the bima. Finally, Rabbi Jacobs requested that all who had come to Reform Judaism from another path – another religion or another branch of Judaism – come up for an aliyah.

Again, a large number – maybe a third of the group – approached. By the conclusion of the Torah service, all of us had stood up for an aliyah, a moving demonstration that each of us has a role in the support of our faith.

This experience resonated with me later, when Rabbi Dan Freelander led a discussion about the development of Reform synagogues, from the 19th Century to the second half of the 20th Century, with the move to suburbia and the Temples of today, familiar to all of us, and most of which are not as successful as they had been.

He posed the question: what will the temple of the 21st Century look like? His answer: it is for us to decide. Just as all incoming presidents participated in the Torah service together, all of us in the Reform Jewish Movement, regardless of the path we’ve taken, can participate in answering this question.

I look forward to exploring answers with you.

Jewish identity, and I love who I have become because of it.

I cannot express how connected I feel to this synagogue. I literally grew up here – from my baby naming ceremony with Rabbi Jim, to Mommy and Me at 4 months old, to Mechina and Day School, and now to Religious School. This school and this Temple are my home, a that I will hold near and dear to my heart always.

Not only have I grown up here at Temple Beth Hillel, but much of my family has grown up here as well, studying for their Bar Mitzvahs and attending confirmation classes, just like me.

On my dad’s side, my grandparents have been a part of Temple Beth Hillel for over 50 years, and have passed on the tradition of going to this same synagogue. From my dad, I have come to realize that TBH is more than just a place for me to learn about my Jewish identity – this Temple is a symbol for L’dor Va’Dor, from generation to generation.

On my mom’s side, for many years there was no sense of Jewish identity beyond celebrating the major holidays. But in their own time, they discovered their Jewish roots. My maternal grandmother, my Baba who is no longer with me, found her Jewish identity in Israel. Not knowing much about her Jewish culture or religion, only knowing that she was Jewish, she found meaning in her heart, which made her care about her faith, and made her feel special within.

Even though she never had her Bat Mitzvah, she bought a tallit on her visit to Israel, because it was her way to feel close to God. That tallit she bought so long ago is the tallit that I wear now. I wear this tallit not only to remember my grandmother, but to connect with my Baba’s Jewish identity in not only a spiritual way, but in a physical way as well.

Where will my Jewish journey take me? I don’t know.

That’s the thing about a journey. You might have an intended path in the beginning, but once that journey begins, you might not know where it will lead until you reach the end. That’s what makes the journey great – what you learn along the way, what you experience and the different paths that you travel and share with others.

I grew up learning Hebrew, and reading from Torah, and even singing Jewish songs, but that does not tell me where my Jewish journey will take me. These events, however, certainly shape my Jewish identity, and help frame who I will become.

I have come to realize how important my journey will become in my life. This stepping-stone in my life, this confirmation, is not an end, but the beginning of a new path. I look forward, with anticipation, to where it will take me.

MAZAL TOV

To Susan and Josh Ackerman, proud parents of Jyaden Greer, their baby girl born on May 19. Big brother is Oliver.

To John & Shelley Limpert, who welcomed their baby girl Penelope on May 6. Big sister is Ava.

To Helen Saltsman, who was blessed with a new great-grandson, Sam.

KOL HAKAVOD

To Religious School student Orly Ballas, who raised almost $50 for the North Hollywood Interfaith Food Pantry from her very first lemonade stand. With her earnings, she made a trip to the 99-cent store and purchased her favorite foods: pasta, beans, canned fruits and vegetables, peanut butter, rice, chicken, tuna, oatmeal, and butterscotch pudding. She then delivered it to the collection box in the Temple lobby.

To Jonah Henry, who created a recycling program for the Temple’s off-site programs (like Seder In The Desert and Tashlich) as a 6th grade Civics Academy project for Millikan Middle School. He raised funds for reusable recycling bins, blue bags, gloves, and signage and worked with Rabbi Sarah to produce and publicize the program.

Jonah, the son of Anna and Andy Henry, is a Religious School student and member of Boy Scout Troop 36.

He is still raising funds for additional recycling materials. You can contribute at http://jewcer.com/project/jonah-s-tbh-recycling-campaign

Jen R. shared her goals for the next year at the end-of-term Parent Committee meeting: to strengthen our community by increasing parent involvement and to take better advantage of elementary school events. She looks to inspire more parents to be involved day-to-day, behind-the-scenes, and in larger Chair positions.

To our Adult Choir, (above, at our June 6 Installation service), who perform monthly at Shabbat services as well as at special events throughout the year.

Choir members are Betsy Abramsohn, Jo Haimovitz, Adena Leon, Evelyn Lever, Susan Martin, Margie Meadows, Jodie Reff, David Schneider, Carmen Sicherman, Mark Singer, Lynnanne Zager, and Lisa Zanville.

Applause also to percussionist Pinchas Mascolo and pianist Eric Belsheim (pictured at right), Cantorial Soloist Andy Henry and Cantor Shana Leon for their talent and hard work.

To the Men of the Food Pantry who meet every Friday morning to unload the food delivery truck and stock the shelves in our basement warehouse. They are the first step in getting bags packed and food distributed to local families in need.

SHALOM, RABBI

We welcome Rabbi Eleanor Steinman to the position of Director of Religious Education, effective July 1.

Born in Los Angeles, Rabbi Steinman holds a Masters of Hebrew Letters, a Masters of Jewish Education, and rabbinic ordination from Hebrew Union College - Jewish Institute of Religion.

She has served congregations in California, Montana, and Toronto, and is currently a board member of the Pacific Association of Reform Rabbis and is the Southern California representative for the Women’s Rabbinic Network. She is also a member of the Central Conference of American Rabbis and the National Association of Temple Educators.

Rabbi Steinman has served as the Executive Director of California Faith for Equality, and as the Director of Programs and Fund Development for A Wider Bridge, an organization that serves to inspire LGBT Jews to deepen their Jewish identity through connection to Israel.

To the 2013-14 Religious School Madrichim, the teaching assistants that contribute so much to our students’ academic accomplishments and self-esteem.

REFUAH SLEIMAH
